Every year when we compile this round-up, I find the retrospective interesting. It says a lot about the things that were on our minds the most strongly over the previous year. Often we've all but forgotten stories that grabbed our attention the most thoroughly by the time the holidays have rolled around.

This year, there was a lot of coverage of Russia and concerns about China. However, the overarching theme was without a doubt, concerns about our food supply.

Without further ado, here are the top 22 of 2022.

#1\) 2 Catastrophic Things Could Happen to Our Supply Chain in November

The biggest story of the year for The OP was this one. We were facing a railway strike and running out of diesel fuel. Somehow, the government managed to kick this can down the road but the strike is still a possibility and the cost of diesel is astronomical, driving up prices even further. This is still a pending event, in my opinion, and it's just a matter of time before it occurs unless something dramatic happens to change the tides. Revisit the article here.
