Warning With Shocking
New Images

By Susan Duclos - All News PipeLine

The headline is a direct quote from an email from a reader who travels, and visits different stores in multiple states, generously spending time to provide ANP with images like the one above, as he helps us document the food crisis here in America.

While there are still some that visit their local grocery stores and find higher prices and less options, but can still find what they want, over the past two years we have been seeing images like the one above, and those below become more and more common.

The email message with that image stated "Worse here than I've seen yet. Chicken section is virtually empty."

The second image in that particular email, is also disturbing as one thinks about those that are shopping there and finding entirely empty sections, like the one shown below.

Reader Image: Witchita, KS - Walmart 4/3/22

I saved the last image our reader sent, the one with the note I used part of in the headline, because the availability of this specific has been decreasing nationwide for months according to the images and notes we get emailed to us, and the whole set of images, from multiple stores indifferent states, confirm that assertion without a doubt.

The full message sent along with that photo, reads:

Seems like pasta is sold out every store I have been in.

Americans foolishly think we couldn't ever fall like Venezuela or Argentina.

They are getting ready to be awakened from their unprepared slumber.

When there is no food there is no peace, America's time of plenty is ending and the casualties will be catastrophic.

Thanks for all the great coverage you have provided.

Now, the Biden regime, along with their sycophants in the press will insist shortages on pasta are because of the Russia/Ukraine conflict, but the images sent to ANP of depleted pasta sections started coming long before that conflict exploded, and continue to this day.

The next set of images, one of which is also the pasta shelves, comes from Sioux Fall

SD Walmart, emailed on April 1, 2022, with a note that reads:

First, it was Eggs and now it's also Pasta.

The eggs have been missing for well over a week now and yesterday morning I was surprised to see the pasta was also mostly bare. Also, some of the shelves have the old COVID trick of pushing everything together and up to the front of the shelf!

This is Sioux Fall SD!

No eggs for over a week!

LEARN TO MAKE YOUR

We have touched on this before, but many thought this issue would resolve itself before they really needed to learn how to make their own pastas and breads. The reasons are plentiful and perfectly valid, including no extra time and/or no skill in pasta or bread making, but now there is no set end in sight, so it is past time to learn to make your own.

Add to that, we have a number of new readers from another website that shut down their comment section, so we would be remiss to not go over it again before moving along to the other items that stores are increasingly finding it harder and harder to keep stocked.

As always, we start with books.

Paper back or hard cover recommended, just in case one day you can't pick up your EReader or fire up your computer to look up the recipes and instructions.

NOTE: The reason for the food shortages goes back to a number of issues, the main one being the lockdowns which threw the entire supply chain into chaos, but the expected upcoming increase in the depleted pasta aisles, stems from the fact that the main supplier of wheat is Russia.

Between the sanctions and the growing hostilities between the U.S. and Russia, expect products made from wheat to continue to decrease in availability worldwide as nations producing wheat will be exporting more to help mitigate what isn't being exported by Russia.

This is also spiking the price of wheat as well.

More than a quarter of the world's wheat exports come from Russia and Ukraine.

As the U.S. does produce wheat now than decades ago, the global supply will continue to decrease for the foreseeable future.

FOOD CRISIS UPDATES.....

A number of recent reports have recently been released which gives us a glimpse of the price hikes that are about to hit America.... on top of the massive inflation we have seen over the past two years.

March 31, 2022: "Chicken

breast, ground beef, pork

prices set to surge higher"

Evercore ISI issued a protein

inflation note this week projecting that most protein prices are forecasted to increase "substantially" due to the higher feed costs, with chicken breast reaching as high as 70% year-over-year in the first half of 2022.

The analysis said pork and ground beef could climb as high as 20% year-over-year during the same period.

April 5, 2022: "Egg, chicken prices rise amid bird flu"

outbreak"

April 3, 2022: "These Are The Foods That Are Skyrocketing In Price, Experts Say - Food prices are at least 5% higher than last year."

After a trip to the grocery store, it's no surprise that food prices have risen.

But according to new data, food prices may be higher than they've ever been.

Researchers at the Food and Agriculture Policy Research

Institute at the University of Missouri say that food prices will be at least 5% higher in 2022 compared to 2021.

That's the biggest single-year increase in 14 years.

Each piece details the narratives as to the reasons for the price increases and shortages, but average Americans paying 5% more, on top of the previous price spikes, aren't caring as much as to "why" but more concerned about how to keep their families fed.

Preppers used to spend more on emergency survival food because of the long lasting shelf life in preparation for a SHTF scenario, but now, the cost, in comparison to purchasing fresh, when you can use a handful in casseroles, stews, soups and salads, is making the freeze dried emergency foods more affordable than grocery store purchased.

BOTTOM LINE

First a thank you to those sending in images from across the country, showing the patterns and decreased availability of these products listed above, and others.

I have long maintained that the MSM, with their "sources" and billion dollar organizations, are nothing compared to every day Americans, from coast to coast, showing and explaining what they are seeing locally.

With that said, the reader warning in the headline is one that should be shared with every single American adult because it is true that "when there is no food there is no peace."
